GOVERNMENT REFORM COMMITTEE ANNOUNCES HEARING ON MAJOR LEAGUE BASEBALL AND USE OF STEROIDS

Washington, D.C. -- Today Chairman Tom Davis (R-VA) and Ranking Minority Member Henry A. Waxman (D-CA) announced a hearing on Major League Baseball's recently negotiated steroids policy. The hearing will focus on how the testing policy will be implemented, and how it will effectively address the use of prohibited steroids by players.

"Some have asked why a congressional hearing is a good idea, why it's necessary," said Rep. Davis. "First, there's a cloud over baseball, and perhaps a public discussion of the issues, with witnesses testifying under oath, can provide a glimpse of sunlight. Second, I'm extremely concerned about the message being sent to children. We have a responsibility to help educate all Americans – but especially young people who admire and emulate their heroes – about the very real health risks associated with steroid use. We can help kids understand that steroids aren't cool."

"Steroid use in America is a significant problem," said Rep. Waxman. "I believe this hearing will help us learn more about how pervasive it is, the steps Major League Baseball has taken to bring it under control, and any additional steps that may be necessary."
